

2003 Schumer Local Aid Report

The bill Senator Schumer introduced with Maine Republican Senator Olympia Snowe would send $40 billion to states, with half of the aid going directly to states and half going directly to local governments. New York State will receive a total of $2.5 billion under the bill's provisions, which allocates half of the funds based on population and half of the funds based on the change in area unemployment levels from 2000 to 2002.

The following report outlines the maximum amount that cities and counties across the state could expect to receive from the Schumer-Snowe local aid bill. For cities in New York State, the report lists the total local aid possible under the legislation's provisions. For counties, the report lists the maximum total aid New York counties could receive and breaks this total number down into population-based and unemployment-based aid.
